Indications are that a line paralleling the Eel River road will be constructed. While it has been denied that the Wabash is behind the project, there is but little question that President Ashley knows where the money to build it, if it is built, is to come from. The Huntington Herald of Dec. 31 says: "It is now announced, however, that preliminary work will be commenced. Persons in Ashley will visit Kendallville, Albion and other points the first of the week securing signatures to the application for a charter and arrangements for committees to take charge of the local work along the line. A corps of engineers will be started out at once and the work pushed as fast as possible. It is hoped that the survey can be made and right of way secured in time to contract the building of the road in the early spring. It is possible that the name of the line may be changed to Ashley, Kendallville & Southwestern, and Logansport be made the objective point instead of Peru.

Losing Confidence in Railway Stocks. A railroad attorney, in speaking of the fate of the Vandalia, the Toledo, St. Louis & Kansas City, and a number of other roads in this State and in Ohio and Illifrom late residence, 165 Richland avenue, Sunday, nois, said there are now so many schemes resorted to to scale debts down legitimately contracted and for making worthless stocks and securities that had been considered gilt-edged when offered for sale, that it will not be possible for a man in the future, unless having unbounded wealth, to invest in either stocks or bonds of the best of the Western roads. There are in this city and in Terre Haute a number of persons who have for many years been receiving from 6 to 10 per cent. dividends annually on the stock of the Terre Haute & Indianapolis road, people who depended on that revenue for their daily liv-LOST OR STOLEN-$15 reward for the return of ing. Three times the paying of semi-annual dividends has been passed; there is little probability that another dividend will be paid; the stockholder is inquiring as to the value of his stock and fails to get an answer to encourage him or her is the belief that it is worth a dollar. Said the attorney: "Were the auditing departments of railroads operated under as rigid rules as the transportation department of most roads it would be much better for the big or the little investor. An Eastern financial paper advocates independent auditing as a means of making the real value of any stock or bend as an investment. It says: "A point toward which our railroad corporations are perhaps moving, though they reach it at present only when in adversity, is the independent auditing of their accounts. Their auditors at present are simply bookkeepers, who are controlled by the directors or by the president of the railroad company only. They state things as it suits "the men on the inside, not as the ordinary stockholder would wish them stated. In England the auditor is chosen by the stockholders, not by the directors, and is an expert accountant, usually a member of a firm of accountants, whose entire business and reputation depends on the honesty and correstness of its work. Such auditors are independent of the railroad officials. They are expected to criticise wrong methods if they detect them-that is what they are for. They stop abuses and they effect savings. Their reports inspire confidence. Collusion is rossible, but not frequent, as the professional auditor has a $20 to $100 a week. Send !cc for instructions to valuable reputation to lose. such independent critics the condition of their properties would be much the better A Desirable Railroad Property. "The Pennsylvania Company," said railroad man who looks upon the Michigan division of the Vandalia as being a road with a good future, "will experience no trouble in unloading that road from the system should they choose to do so, but in my opinion the Pennsylvania Company will not let go of the division of the Vandalia system, as some of the newspaper articles have hinted they would, and when the road is offered for sale at foreclosure there will be other bidders in the field than the Pennsylvania Company." The Terre Haute Gazette says: The Evansville & Terre Haute is owned by the Standard Oil Company, and thus has sufficient backing to carry out the plan of purchasing the Logansport & Terre Flaute branch of the Vandalia, which has been hinted at. It is known to railroad men that there are not the kindliest fee ings between the owners of the Evansville & 'rerre Haute and the Chicago & Eastern Illinois, though there is a traffic agreement between them. This agreement both have been anxious to break for some time. By the purchase of the Logansport division the Evansville & Terre Haute would get a road that would open a new country, and one in which there is considerable business. In connection with a line of steamers, it would have a Chicago route that would cause the rival lines considerable trouble. When the Logansport line is sold at receiver's sale it is the understanding that the Standard On Company will be one of the bidders. Ingalls Not to Succeed Depew. be promoted to succeed the Hon. Chauncey | Railway south of New Castle junction. What Would Move the Grain Crop. There is a growing feeling with freight men who have investigated the matter that there should be a closer equalization of freight rates between Western and Eastern roads. For instance, the charge for bringing corn from Nebraska to Chicago, five hundred miles, is 75 per cent. of its value when in Chicago, while the rate from Chicago to New York, one thousand miles, is one-half of its Chicago value. It is thought by traveling freight agents that before the immense grain crops of the last year move readily there must be a readjustment of rates between points of shipment and destination of the freight. While this statement more concerns grain than any other class of freights, there is ample room for a more equitable basis of rates on other com-

Tracklaying on the extension of the Kansas City, Pittsburg & Gulf is progressing at the rate of one mile a day between Pattensburg and Trenton, Mo., and in four months it is expected the entire line will be opened for business. A line will then be established to Omaha through its connection with the Omaha & St. Louis. Officials on the Pennsylvania lines give no credit to the report that the Pennsylvania is behind a new express company. If such a report were true it would hardly originate in St. Joseph, Mo. The Pennsyivania Company could not get any more net money than it does now out of its relation to the Adams Express Company in any new company which might be organized. Western lines are copying after some of the Eastern lines and are trying to form a side agreement for the purpose of restricting advertising. It is proposed to do away with advertising on theater programmes, publications of societies, baseball programmes, picnic bills, etc., and advertising only in the daily and weekly newspapers having a legitimate circulation. A traffic arrangement has been entered into between the Wheeling & Lake Erie Railway and the Baltimore & Ohio whereby the former company is to enter Cleveland over the latter line. The W. & L. E. Company has been desirous for a long time of having an entrance to that city and negotiations looking to that end between the two companies mentioned have been in progress for the past two years. The new arrangement, which goes into effect immediately, will give the W. & L. E the short st route from Wheeling to the lake, the distance being 140 miles. The following changes in traffic officials of the Lake Shore Railway were announced yesterday: The office of assistant general freight agent at Cleveland is discontinued because of the resignation of J. G. James. James L. Clark is appointed general Western freight agent, with headquarters at Chicago. M. S. Chase, general freight agent at Chicago, will have charge of local traffic between Chicago and Dune Park. James L. WINDOW GARDENING.

The Plants to Select, and How They Should Be Treated and Cared For.

The agricultural experiment station of Purdue University, through Mr. William Stuart, assistant botanist, has issued the appended bulletin:

Too often the class of plants selected for window gardening are not adapted to the conditions of temperature and light to which they are subjected. Generally only two classes of plants are grown; those reof 10 degrees to 15 degrees during the day, and those which require a temperature of about 15 degrees less. In the first class are included geraniums (with the exception of pelargonimus, often called Martha Washington geraniums), roses, fuchsias, ferns. palms, begonias, etc., and in the latter, carnations, hyacinths, cyclamens, cinerarshows that four firemen of passenger trains drew premiums ranging from $5.05 to $10.30, fas, geranium (pelargonium) azaleas, primand fourteen firemen of freight locomoroses, etc.

Plants grown in a dry heated atmos-here do not thrive as well as those grown in a moist one, and are more subject to the attacks of red spider and aphis (lice.) The air may be rendered moister by keeping an open vessel of water in the room. Red spider may be kept in check by frequently spraying the plants with water, while the aphis can usually be deterred from attacking the plants by dusting them occasionally with tobacco dust. If they should prove troublesome they may be killed by spraying the plants with a liquid tobacco solution. A tobacco extract is also sold under the name of "Rose Leaf Ex-tract," which is a valuable insecticide. HETEROPHEMY.

How an Agent's Mental Ailment Ruined the Southern Confederacy. Wallace Putnam Reed, in Chicago Times-

Herald. The Southern Confederacy was only a few months old when a financial agent was sent to England on a very important mission. Mr. Blank was a politician and a banker. He was also an elegant gentleman, with many influential acquaintances on both sides of the water. If Mr. Blank had been less ambitious it might have been better for him and for the Confederacy. But he believed that he was a born diplomat, and was anxious to distinguish him-

Before leaving Richmond he had a long talk with Memminger, the secretary of the treasury. "If I find that England will aid us," he said, "I will send you word by some reliable blockade runner. It will be a very brief message, but you will understand it, while it will mean nothing to the enemy if it should be intercepted." The confidential agent slipped through the lines, and in less than a month was comfortably established in London. In the metropolis he found many Southerners and many prominent Englishmen who sympahized with the secessionists. He saw Mr. Yancey, the Confederate minister, every day, and the two worked together in harmony. Mr. Yancey was a practical man, and he was not long in coming to the conclusion that no aid was to be expected from the British government. When he found that the factories were changing their machinery to suit the India cotton, and that the acreage of the staple had been greatly increased in that country, he gave up all hope. The abolition sentiment controls he said to Mr. Blank. "Some of the statesmen would like to help the South, in order to break up the Union, but the people will never consent. The South will have to fight her battles alone. Blank felt pretty blue when he heard this and that night he wrote the single word 'Successful" on a thin slip of paper, and skillfully secreted it in an ordinary coat button. The next day he was visited by a Southern friend, who remained with him for an hour or more. During his stay he removed the top button from his coat and sewed on the one furnished by Mr. Blank. "I understand it all, he said when he left. "If I get safely to Wilmington I will go at once to Richmond and give this button to Mr. Memminger. I prefer not to know the nature of the message, especially as you say that it explains itself."

"Yes," replied Blank, "it will be understood by the secretary, and as it refers to a state secret I am not at liberty to say anything about it. The two shook hands, and the gentleman with the precious button took the next train for Liverpool, where he boarded a steamer bound for Wilmington. The steamer was chased by federal cruisers, but she managed to reach her destination without any serious mishap. In the course of two or three days the mysterious traveler called on Mr. Memminger in Richmond and presented him with a button. The secretary cut off its covering in a hurry and smiled when he read the word "Successful." "Did Mr. Blank show this message to you?" he asked. "No. We both thought it best that I the window of the paying teller out into the tale expression of my face would betray moment. anything if the enemy captured me.' He could not stand it, and despite the danger of the trip he made his arrangements to return home. His interview with Memminger was a stormy one when he arrived at Richmond.
